Cal., Dec. 22.—Frank Willard, fore the morning. After shooting at the judge, Willard fired on of the lumber yard, passed the yard of Lucas Bros. and headed toward Spring Canyon. An armed posse in pursuit immediately and arrested him just as he was entering the canyon.

Willard was running faster than the wind and was gaining ground on them when he was shot. When he was shot, he came up in a wagon. Deputy Sheriff Smith and Lucas Bros. and other men followed him. Willard yelled for mercy and the posse stopped. Willard was then taken to was taken to the asylum. Willard and several others who were in the courtroom, stepped out.

ILLUSIONS THE THING, DECLARES MARK TWAIN

Artists Must Get Away From the Conventional to Succeed.

NEW YORK, Dec. 22.—Mark Twain was the guest of honor at the monthly dinner of the Society of Illustrators last night in the rooms of the Aldine association. Andrew Carnegie occupied the place of honor at the right of Dan Beard, president of the society and toastmaster. Others at the guest table were Sir Casper Purdon Clarke, Alphonso R. Balleray, Thomas A. Janvier, Casper Whitney, Albert Boyden, Frank A. Vanderlip, Rollo Ozden, Arthur Scribner, Arthur Brisbane, J. J.
Shannon, Henry J. Wright and Harrison S. Morris.

Warns the Magnates.
Toastmaster Beard opened the speechmaking with a warning to trust magnates present that they were attending a meeting of a trades union—a union, however, of men who believed in the measure of profit from labor that comes from individual merit.

Andrew Carnegie said he would like to join this young set. He said he all his life had been tempted by a strain of Bohemianism. He had known Bret Harte and Josh Billings, and was therefore used to the highest society as well as the basest of the evening. He said he was proud to call Mark Twain friend, and as he took him by the hand was rejoiced to be told that he might become a member of the society.

Introduces Twain.
The toastmaster, in introducing Mark Twain, said he had associated with the Tom Sawyers and the Huckleberries since in his part of the country, and he was sure they made better citizens than the Little Lord Fauntleroy.

The diners stood up and gave three cheers for the man who was dubbed their saint and philosopher. It was at this point that Miss Helen Augustine, attended by a page, advanced in the impersonation of Joan D'Arc and presented a bay leaf wreath to the guest of honor.

Cut Out Conventional.
"Now there," said the veteran author in acknowledgment, "is an illustration—a pure and beautiful young woman. The conventional Joan D'Arc," said he, "is an offense to all who know her history. The conventional face given to Joan D'Arc by the artist who paints her as a coarse peasant has the fixed expression of a horse."

"Members of your guild," said he, addressing his hosts, "must get away from the conventional."

Illusions the Things.
He played the whole gamut from gay to grave with a wealth of interwoven pathos, and finally he said of the elements "that made up the experiences of life. 'The illusions are the only things that are valuable, and God help the man who reaches the time when he meets only the realities.'"
